SPEAKERS:

Emrys Schoemaker is Director and co-founder of iMedia Associates and a PhD student at the London School of Economics and Social Science (LSE). He is a communications and conflict specialist with extensive experience designing communications and media based initiatives for development and peace-building purposes. He has a particular interest in the ways that social media and mobile phones are transforming people's lives and the implications for changing citizen-state relations and political processes. He gained a Masters in Peace Studies at Bradford University, then spent two years in Pakistan in 2004 — 2006 as a media advisor for DFID, the UN and civil society organisations, where he designed, managed and advised on media and communication initiatives in the areas of governance, conflict and health, particularly HIV and AIDS. He has recently conducted consultancies in Pakistan and Afghanistan exploring strategies for counter extremism.

Timo Luege:

I'm passionate about communication, information and discovering how the two can be used to make the world a better place.

My two main areas of expertise are:

1. Communication through digital media
2. Media relations during humanitarian relief operations

Over the last thirteen years I have worked for German national public radio, a wire agency, the Red Cross Red Crescent Movement and the United Nations.
